A previous study on the role of the prefrontal cortex (PFC) in moral decision-making suggested that the right lateral prefrontal cortex, which exhibits function differences between a moral and immoral condition, is closely involved in the process of decision-making in the moral domain (Klein et al., 1999a). We performed single photon emission computed tomography (SPECT) studies to further clarify the role of the right lateral PFC in the moral domain. In our experiment, the participants were asked whether their personal moral code included the right of killing self-defense or the right of murder, because their killing of self-defense (a type of aggression) was cruel, and their killing of another person (a type of non-aggression) was a type of murder. The experiment consisted of two conditions: the moral condition in which the participants recognized the right

Inside the form is a function called GetBtn which uses a hidden input to call an ajax function that calls the start and end dates and uses jquery ajax to send it.
